ORDER DENYING MOTIONS TO INTERVENE

Re: Dkt. Nos. 35, 32, 40

1 Now before the Court for consideration is the motion to intervene filed by the Sportsmen's 2 Alliance Foundation, Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, Wisconsin Bear Hunters Association, and 3 Michigan Bear Hunters Association (collectively, "Coalition").<sup>1</sup> The Court has considered the 4 parties' papers, relevant legal authority, and the record in this case, and it finds this matter suitable 5 for disposition without oral argument. See N.D. Civ. L.R. 7-1(b). The Court VACATES the 6 hearing set for June 25, 2021. For the following reasons, the Court DENIES the motion to 7 intervene.

8 BACKGROUND

9 Plaintiffs in these related cases filed complaints against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service
10 and the United States Department of the Interior ("Federal Defendants") challenging the decision 11 to remove gray wolves in the lower 48 states from the list of endangered and threatened species 12 under the ESA ("Delisting Rule"). See 85 Fed. Reg. 69778 (Nov. 3, 2020). Plaintiffs allege that 13 the Delisting Rule violates the ESA and the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA"). Plaintiffs 14 seek a vacatur of the Delisting Rule and declaratory and injunctive relief.

15 The Coalition, which is comprised of hunting, wildlife, and conservation organizations, 16 filed a motion to intervene on May 6, 2021. It seeks intervention to protect the interests of its 17 members in: (1) being able to lawfully defend hunting dogs from attacks by wolves when hunting 18 other species; (2) hunting elk, deer, and other species whose populations can be directly and 19 adversely affected by unmanaged wolf predation; and (3) being able to lawfully hunt gray wolves 20 where those populations are recovered. The organizations' members include recreational hunters 21 and hunting guides. The Coalition asserts that one of the member organizations, the Rocky 22 Mountain Elk Foundation, has expended substantial sums in land acquisitions, conservation 23 easements, and other habitat protection and enhancement activities. According to the Coalition, if 24 the Delisting Rule is vacated, gray wolves will once again be listed under the ESA in states of 25 concern to the Coalitions' members.

26
27

---

<sup>1</sup> The Coalition has filed the same motion to intervene in all three related cases. Plaintiffs in the 28 related cases filed a joint statement of non-opposition. For purposes of clarity, citations to the docket in this Order refer to the filings submitted in the lead case, Defenders of Wildlife et al., v.
U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, 3:21-cv-00344-JSW.

1 Previously, the National Rifle Association of America (“NRA”) and Safari Club
2 International (“SCI”) (collectively, “Intervenor Defendants”) sought to jointly intervene in this 3 action. The Intervenor Defendants sought intervention to protect their members’ interests in 4 hunting gray wolves and their organizational interest in protecting hunting as a conservation
5 management tool and traditional recreational activity. (See generally Dkt. No. 21.) The Court
6 granted the motion to intervene on May 3, 2021 subject to certain conditions. (Dkt. No. 34.)

7 The Federal Defendants take no position on the Coalition’s motion. Plaintiffs do not 8 oppose the motion to intervene but seek to impose certain conditions on the Coalition’s 9 involvement should the Court grant the request for intervention. (See Dkt. No. 53.) The 10 Intervenor Defendants have not submitted a response to the motion to intervene.

11 The Court will address additional facts as necessary in the analysis.

ANALYSIS

A. The Court Denies the Request for Intervention as of Right.

14        The Coalition argues that it is entitled to intervention as a matter of right under Fed. R.
15      Civ. P. 24(a)(2). Courts apply a four-part test to a motion to intervene as of right: (1) the motion 16      must be timely; (2) the applicant must claim a “significantly protectable” interest relating to the 17      property or transaction which is the subject of the action; (3) the applicant must be so situated that 18      the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede its ability to protect that 19      interest; and (4) the applicant’s interest must be inadequately represented by the parties to the 20      action. Wilderness Soc. v. U.S. Forest Serv., 630 F.3d 1173, 1177 (9th Cir. 2011). Although Rule 21      24(a)(2) is construed broadly in favor of intervenors, id. at 1179, the applicant bears the burden of 22      showing that each of the four elements is met, Prete v. Bradbury, 438 F.3d 949, 954 (9th 23      Cir. 2006). “Failure to satisfy any one of the requirements is fatal to the application.” Perry v.
24      Proposition 8 Official Proponents, 587 F.3d 947, 950 (9th Cir. 2009).

25 The Court finds that the Coalition has satisfied the first three elements. As to timeliness, 26 the Coalition seeks to intervene at the early stages of the litigation. Although the administrative 27 record has now been filed and Plaintiffs have represented their desire to resolve the matter 28 expeditiously because fall hunting seasons in several states, the Court has not yet issued any

1 substantive rulings. Accordingly, given that the litigation is in the early stages, the Court finds the 2 motion timely. With regard to factors two and three, the Coalition argues that it has a significant 3 interest in the subject matter of the underlying action and that denial of the motion would impair 4 its ability to protect its interest. The Coalition argues that state laws authorize wolf hunting
5 seasons and permit members to use force to protect their hunting dogs. If Plaintiffs are successful 6 in challenging the Delisting Rule, gray wolves will come under federal protection, and these state 7 laws would be eliminated. The Coalition also argues that it has an interest in securing the value of 8 conservation easements and habitat protection for elk, which will be weakened if gray wolves 9 remain protected. The Court finds that this is sufficient to show that the disposition of this 10 litigation may impair the Coalition's ability to protect its interests.

11 The fourth factor examines whether the existing parties adequately protect the proposed 12 intervenors' interests. In evaluating the adequacy of representation, the Court considers: "(1) 13 whether the interest of a present party is such that it will undoubtedly make all of a proposed 14 intervenor's arguments; (2) whether the present party is capable and willing to make such 15 arguments; and (3) whether a proposed intervenor would offer any necessary elements to the 16 proceeding that other parties would neglect." Arakaki v. Cayetano, 324 F.3d 1078, 1086 (9th Cir.
17 2003). "The most important factor in determining the adequacy of representation is how the 18 [proposed intervenor's] interest compares with the interests of existing parties." Id. "Where the 19 party and the proposed intervenor share the same 'ultimate objective,' a presumption of adequacy 20 of representation applies." Freedom from Religion Found., Inc. v. Geithner, 644 F.3d 836, 841 21 (9th Cir. 2011). To rebut the presumption, an applicant must make a "compelling showing" of 22 inadequacy of representation. Citizens for Balanced Use v. Montana Wilderness Ass'n, 647 F.3d 23 893, 898 (9th Cir. 2011). In the present case, the Coalition, the Federal Defendants, and the 24 Intervenor Defendants share the same ultimate objective of upholding the Delisting Rule.
25 Therefore, the presumption of adequate representation applies, and the Coalition must make a 26 "compelling showing" of inadequacy of representation.

27 The Coalition offers several arguments to show that the existing parties will not adequately 28 represent their interests. First, the Coalition contends that the Federal Defendants have a unique

1 obligation to balance competing interests, and this obligation could cause the Federal Defendants 2 to advocate or take positions that would dispose of the Coalition’s interests in an attempt to 3 negotiate a settlement of the litigation. However, the Coalition has not presented any evidence 4 suggesting that the Federal Defendants do not intend to vigorously defend the Delisting Rule or 5 that settlement is anything more than hypothetical. Indeed, the filings by the Federal Defendants
6 thus far indicate otherwise. (See Dkt. No. 41 (noting that the parties do not believe settlement 7 conversations would be productive at this time).) Moreover, it seems that the presence of the 8 Intervenor Defendants, whose recreational hunting interests align with the Coalition, would lessen 9 the concern that the litigation would be resolved without consideration of the Coalition’s interests.

10 The Coalition next argues that the Federal Defendants do not share the Coalition’s narrow 11 recreational and economic interests. However, the Federal Defendants are not the only defendants 12 in this action. The Intervenor Defendants have successfully intervened as parties to this litigation 13 seeking to protect recreational and conservationist hunting interests very similar to those advanced 14 by the Coalition. (See Dkt. No. 21, NRA Mot. to Intervene at 3 (noting that the NRA and SCI 15 promote and defend hunting as a sport and a conservation method and seek to protect those 16 interests in this litigation).) The Coalition’s members and the members of the Intervenor 17 Defendant share nearly identical interests, including a desire to take advantage of state-authorized 18 wolf hunting seasons, to protect hunting dogs from wolf attacks, and to manage the impact that the 19 expanding gray wolf population is having on other animal populations. (Compare Dkt. No. 21-1, 20 Randal Robert Mayes Decl., with Dkt. No. 35-1, Decl. of Duane J. Acker; compare Dkt. No. 21-4, 21 Decl. of Anthony W. Biebel, with Dkt. No. 35-1, Decl. Frederick L. Leske Jr.) The overlapping 22 interests between the Intervenor Defendants and the Coalition is further evidenced by the fact that 23 the record shows that several members of the Intervenor Defendants are also members of the 24 Coalition’s organizations. (See Dkt. No. 21-1, Mayes Decl. ¶ 3 (attesting that he is a current 25 member of the NRA and Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation); Dkt. No. 21-4, Decl. of Glenn N.
26 Goergen ¶ 3 (attesting that he is a member of NRA and Sportmen’s Alliance, and Rocky Mountain 27 Elk Foundation).) The Coalition does not address this clear overlap in interests. Accordingly, it 28 has failed to make a compelling showing that its interests are not adequately represented by the

1 Intervenor Defendants.

2 The Coalition also identifies two narrow issues on which it intends to focus that it believes 3 will not be represented by either the Federal Defendants or the Intervenor Defendants. First, the 4 Coalition argues it has a unique interest in the delisting of gray wolves in the Great Lakes region.
5 According to the Coalition, the gray wolf population in Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota is 6 uniquely situated compared to the gray wolf populations in other regions. However, the fact that 7 the other Defendants have not identified a specific interest in the Great Lakes region does not 8 necessarily mean that they will not adequately represent this interest. See Perry, 587 F.3d at 954 9 (observing that adequacy of representation does not turn on whether an existing party will litigate 10 a case “in the exact manner” that a proposed intervenor would). Indeed, the Intervenor 11 Defendants’ submission makes clear that they represent members who hunt in the Great Lakes 12 region, and there is no indication that they would be unable or unwilling to address the differences 13 in wolf populations across various regions. (See, e.g., NRA Mot. to Intervene at 2.) Accordingly, 14 the Coalition has not made a compelling showing that the existing Defendants would be unwilling 15 or incapable of addressing the differences in wolf populations among various regions, including 16 the Great Lakes region, such that intervention is required.

17 Second, the Coalition argues that intervention is warranted because it will offer a unique 18 interpretation of the term “significant portion of its range” in the ESA’s definition of “endangered 19 species.” The Coalition contends that the Plaintiffs in the three related cases are likely to apply 20 different interpretations to the term. According to the Coalition, it intends to advocate for a 21 nuanced interpretation of the term, but it fears that the Federal Defendants may advocate an 22 interpretation of the term that would favor broad delisting or listing. Again, the Coalition does not 23 address the Intervenor Defendants or argue that they would not adequately represent this interest.
24 Regardless, the Coalition has not made a compelling showing that this issue represents “more than 25 a mere difference in litigation strategy.” Citizens for Balanced Use, 647 F.3d at 899. Given that 26 all Plaintiffs, regardless of how they interpret the term, seek a complete vacatur of the Delisting 27 Rule, the Coalition has not shown that the interpretation of the term will be a necessary element to 28 the proceeding.

1       The Court concludes the Coalition has not made a compelling showing of inadequacy of 2 representation, and it DENIES the Coalition's motion for intervention as a matter of right on this 3 basis.

4       B. The Court Declines to Grant Permissive Intervention.

5       In the alternative, the Coalition argues that it is entitled to permissive intervention under 6 Rule 24(b). Permissive intervention under Rule 24(b) requires "(1) an independent ground for 7 jurisdiction; (2) a timely motion; and (3) a common question of law and fact between the movant's 8 claim or defense and the main action." Blum v. Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc., 712 9 F.3d 1349, 1353 (9th Cir.2013). Unlike intervention as of right, "even if all three requirements are 10 satisfied, the district court has discretion to deny permissive intervention." SEC v. Small Bus.
11 Capital Corp., Civ. No. 5:12-03237 EJD, 2014 WL 3749900, at *2 (N.D. Cal. June 29, 2014).
12 "[P]ractical and equitable considerations play a large role in a court's decision to grant or deny 13 permissive intervention. Lennar Mare Island, LLC v. Steadfast Ins. Co., No. 1:12-cv-02182-KJM-14 KJN, 2016 WL 5847010, at *5 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 6, 2016) (citing Spangler v. Pasadena City Bd. of 15 Ed., 552 F.2d 1326, 1329 (9th Cir. 1977)). In exercising its discretion, the court must consider 16 whether the intervention would prejudice the parties or delay the litigation, or whether the 17 intervenor would contribute to the development of the facts and the equitable adjudication of the 18 legal questions, are important considerations. Id.; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(3). "[T]he court 19 may also consider other factors in the exercise of discretion, including 'the nature and extent of the 20 intervenors' interest' and 'whether the intervenors' interests are adequately represented by other 21 parties." Perry, 587 F.3d at 950.

22       Here, although the Coalition satisfies the threshold requirements for permissive 23 intervention, the Court, in its discretion, concludes that permissive intervention is not warranted.
24 As discussed above, the Coalition's interests are adequately represented by existing parties. In 25 particular, the Coalition shares nearly identical interests with the Intervenor Defendants making it 26 unlikely that permitting intervention would contribute to the development of facts or legal 27 questions. Additionally, practical considerations weigh against intervention. Although the 28 Coalition has agreed to intervene subject to a set of conditions, adding another party to these

1 actions may nevertheless delay the proceedings. The Federal Defendants have now submitted the 2 administrative record, and Plaintiffs have represented that they are eager to brief summary 3 judgment to avoid the need to seek injunctive relief before certain states open wolf hunting 4 seasons in the fall. Intervention would potentially complicate what is already a somewhat 5 unwieldy situation involving three related cases, numerous Plaintiff organizations, Federal 6 Defendants, and Intervenor Defendants, and it would not contribute to an efficient resolution of 7 the issues. For these reasons, the Court DENIES the motion for permissive intervention.

8 C. The Court Will Permit the Coalition to Participate as Amicus Curiae.

9 The Court, however, will allow the Coalition to participate as amicus curiae. While not a 10 party to the litigation, the “classic role of amicus curiae” is to “assist[] in a case of general public 11 interest, supplement[] the efforts of counsel, and draw[] the court’s attention to law that escaped 12 consideration. Miller-Wohl Co. v. Comm’r of Lab. & Indus. State of Mont., 694 F.2d 203, 204
13 (9th Cir. 2012). The Coalition has not requested status as amicus curiae, but the Court has “‘broad 14 discretion’ to permit amicus briefs.” Oakley v. Devos, No. 20-CV-3215, 2020 WL 3268661, at 15 *13 (N.D. Cal. June 17, 2020) (quoting Hoptowit v. Ray, 682 F.2d 1237, 1260 (9th Cir. 1982)).
16 Given that the Coalition’s interests are adequately represented by the existing Defendants, the 17 Court finds that participation as amicus curiae is more appropriate than intervention. See Los 18 Angeles SMSA Ltd. P’ship v. City of Los Angeles, California, 817 F. App’x 350, 352 (9th Cir.
19 2020) (finding district court’s denial of permissive intervention appropriate where the proposed 20 intervenor’s interests were adequately represented, participation as a party was likely to delay 21 proceedings, and proposed intervenor was permitted to participate as amicus curiae). To the 22 extent the Coalition seeks to provide a unique perspective on the issues in this litigation, it may 23 present those unique arguments and perspectives in an amicus brief in support of the Defendants’ 24 anticipated summary judgment motions. Accordingly, the Coalition is granted permission to file 25 an amicus curiae brief in support of Defendants’ anticipated summary judgment motions.

26 CONCLUSION

27 For the foregoing reasons, the Court DENIES the Coalition’s motion to intervene. The 28 Court, however, will GRANT the Coalition permission to file an amicus curiae brief in support of

1 the Defendants' anticipated cross-motions for summary judgment. Any amicus brief shall comply 2 with all applicable Local Rules and may not exceed 25 pages.

3 IT IS SO ORDERED.
